The Winter Months.....

With winter well and truly taking hold, it is hard to imagine going out on the Hauraki Gulf for a weekend on the water. Blustery chilling winds do not make sailing comfortable, though many may say that it is not the comfort they seek but the thrill of the ride and the challenge of sailing in these arduous conditions.

With the wintery winds the Yachties can always be sailing, though the last long weekend may have been a tad frustrating for sailors, with becalmed seas forcing a go slow to their destination.

However, for those of you with launches, that long weekend would've been just magic; 'one out of the box' and all that stuff.

Flat seas and blue skies made for the most perfect of boating trips, with a mass of motors heading in all directions around the Gulf.

So, when the wind's not blowing for the Yachties, and the weather's too cold even for the most adventurous of Launchies then the time would be right for a little TLC.

Winter can be hard on the old boat, so ensuring that all timber is weather tight is imperative. Water is the enemy of wood on a boat, so spend some time going over the boat, checking on the integrity of all varnished and painted surfaces. Check out areas around windows for evidence of water penetration due to the possibility of compromised seals and also any fixtures and fittings on decks and cabin tops. Look for signs of 'nail sickness'. If water is in contact with through hull/deck fastenings, then there will be evidence of corrosive activity.

If you're not too sure what to look for, then it may be well worth your while and your pocket in the long run, to have a professional boat builder look over your boat. Certainly prevention of a problem is easier than the fix. With the damp cold weather the other 'winter issue' with some boats is the unwanted growth of mould. With a lot of modern boats, dehumidifiers are regularly hooked up along marinas, which are great in absorbing all that damp that moulds love.

However, if you use a dehumidifier in wooden boats there is a risk that too much moisture from the wrong places gets absorbed; ie: from the wood.

So, how to manage the moisture? It is a bit tricky and I know most people would have a different take on it, but probably the key ingredient to mould prevention would be good air flow. A well ventilated boat with vents facing to the north will do a lot more good than facing the cold damp winds coming from the south. Also, wiping down all painted surfaces with a weak solution of Janola or vinegar will stem any growth of moulds. Going and opening up the boat, for half an day even if you don't go out does wonders. You can relax with a book, a hot toddy and think of all the good you're doing.
